About the IFAT India 2025 Conference

The global imperative for environmental sustainability has never been more urgent, and India stands at a pivotal moment in its journey towards a circular economy. The 2030 sustainability deadlines are approaching fast, yet water and waste goals still lag in execution. This critical need drives IFAT India 2025 Conference to bring key players together to turn India's commitments into on-ground results.

Back this October with a sharpened, action-oriented agenda, the IFAT India 2025 Conference is set to become the country's definitive forum for water, wastewater and solid-waste solutions.

Building on the momentum of 2024—where India's surging urbanisation underscored an urgent need for resilient, resource-efficient systems—the 2025 edition condenses breakthrough insight into a dynamic three-day programme designed to move beyond discussion and drive implementation.

Co-located with India's largest trade fair on waste technologies, this conference is set to host a powerful convergence of visionaries and doyens, from municipal leaders, industry captains, and regulators to policymakers, technocrats, researchers, and solution providers. The platform aims to translate high-level sustainability goals into real-world impact through practical models, collaborative innovation, case study illustrations, global best practices, and policy-enabling dialogue.

With its focus on sector-specific challenges, scalable solutions, and cross-disciplinary collaboration, the IFAT India 2025 Conference offers an unmissable opportunity for every stakeholder seeking to be at the forefront of India's water and waste management agenda.
